Welcome to The New Zealand Carnivorous Plant Society

The NZCPS is a non-profit making organisation which promotes the growing interest in carnivorous plants within New Zealand. The objectives of the NZCPS are to provide an exchange of information on carnivorous plants, particularly in relation to New Zealand conditions and to co-ordinate efforts to propagate and increase the availability of carnivorous plants for all.

There is an increasing interest in the cultivation of carnivorous plants both here in New Zealand and overseas. Long thought of as botanical novelties with difficult cultivation requirements and best left to the experts, the general public are now discovering that not only are these plants highly specialised killing machines, they are also highly decorative and worthwhile additions to the home environment.

From a botanical viewpoint, carnivorous plants are surely some of the most fascinating plants in existence. You'll find out that not only are these plants so different from most other plants in cultivation, they are also some of the most beautiful.

Forget that sense of macabre in that a plant is able to trap its own food and nutrients, but open your eyes to the wonderful world of carnivorous plants.

The NZCPS consists of members throughout New Zealand and overseas who engage in the cultivation, study and conservation of carnivorous plants from around the world. We are united in our strong interest in the more than 600 species and subspecies of carnivorous plants that have been described from areas as diverse as tropical rain forests to alpine herb fields.
